Interest as paramount to all others; and as a citizen, I warn the people to "hedge them in" as far as possible at the ballot-box, and to see to it that they do not pass by default, or for want of organized and united effort, into the hands of any but white men, and only into the hands of such of those as will not barter away their auing targety and realising quickly. The same results await those who have yet to advertise, if they but await themselves of the only means known in modern times by which traders can put themselve.

ADVERTISE.

the Philadelphia Age: The Comptroller of Tennessee is an efficient electioneerer against the Radical party. His report of the financial condition of that State tells a sad fale of corruption, wasteluiness and political favoritism. There are outstanding warrants against the State amounting warrants against the State amounting to nearly three hundred thousand dollars, and the Comptroller declares the calls for the payment of these evidences of public indebtedness are many and urgent, and some provision must be made to place the Treasury in a paymade to place the Treasury in a paying condition. Very little money is being received, while warrants are being constantly issued on the Treasury. The last July interest on the State debt has not been paid, and it is not probable that the approaching January interest will be paid. The receipts into the State Treasury during the four and a half years that the "loyal party" held sway were $9,024,182—which is a fourth more than the entire receipts for the ten years previous to the war. The Radicals do not seem to have cared for expenses. They expended $621,355 on the sessions of their Legislature; $172,303 on public printing, given out to worthless "loyal" papers established purposely to devour it; $000,000 was added to be an entire to a time of they door to they can returned to Southern planters who had finished the harvest in the West might be employed to assist in securing the crops at the South, and a number of them came to Illinois and Indiana in October to look for hands, They succeeded beyond their expectations, and returned with a force of industrious laborers sufficient to pick their cotton and grind their cane independent of the unreliable negroes who, in some places, leave the plantations at the time when they are most needed.
